COLECO CORPORATE CENTER

Dear ColecoVision Video Club Member:

The ColecoVision Video Club has enjoyed tremendous success in 1983. Unfortunately, Coleco can no longer invest the time and personnel necessary to continue to do a good job.

Effective in January 1984, the ColecoVision Video Club and Experience magazine will be discontinued.

Fortunately, readers need not lose heart. In March, Scholastic Magazine and Coleco Industries will publish the Adam Family Computing magazine. All video club members are eligible to receive a free issue.

Adam Family Computing will be filled with news about the games, software and hardware for the Adam Computer System and module as well as new cartridges for ColecoVision. We think you'll enjoy it so much that you just might fill out the subscription card to receive it regularly.

Sincerely,

and Advertising

P.S. Thanks so much for submitting your Strategy Tips. We received an overwhelming response and you must be congratulated! Look for the winner in our final issue. Best of luck....

Dear Consumer:

Coleco has sold its entire inventory of ADAM and ColecoVision products to a number of its customers.

As a result of this action, we are no longer in a position to sell electronic hardware or software directly to the consumer.

Coleco is still committed to the consumer in terms of warranty service and support. Our "800" line remains open and Honeywell will continue to do the technical servicing for the ADAM Family Home Computer and there are still authorized service centers set up to repair ColecoVision.

- Please check your local retail stores such as Kay-Bee Toys and Hobby, Zayres and Toys-R-Us, for the items you wish to purchase.

Thank you for your letter and interest in Coleco products.

Sincerely,

Judy
